

Review report

Final title: Open Science: Knowledge for the people, by the people, and with the people

Title at submission: Open Science: Knowledge for the people, by the people, and with the people

Submission date: 30-Nov-24

Revised submission: 9-Jan-25

Accepted: 8-Jan-25

Editor: M Mostafa Zaman, ORCID: 0000-0002-1736-1342

1.	Comment	Is Open Science a proper noun? If not, should we change the spelling?
	Response	Indeed "Open Science" is being used as proper noun.
2.	Comment	How does it differ from the Creative Commons initiative?
	Response	Open Science and Creative Common initiative are both initiatives aimed at promoting accessibility and collaboration, but they focus on different aspects of knowledge sharing. The aim of Creative Common initiative is to facilitate the distribution of content while protecting the rights of creators. On the other hand, the primary goal of Open Science is to enhance the rigor, accountability, and reproducibility of research while fostering inclusion and equity in scientific endeavors.
3.	Comment	Could you add a line or two to the manuscript in this respect either as a preamble or comment at the end.
	Response	I have done it and uploaded in the system. In case needed – the updated file also attached.